HANDSOME GOWNS AT THE HORSE SHOW.

The horse show at New York continues to be the society attraction.

The present show has never been exceeded in brilliancy of costumes and jewels. No gown is permitted to appear in the atmosphere of the tan bark more than once. No sum less than $300 has been expended on any of these marvelous frocks. The deduction from these two facts is that in the course of the week the average smart woman's attire, omitting jewels and fure, represents fully $3 600.

Added to this the sum expended for the gorgeous fars and glittering gems that make beauty itself more charming, and there is marvel that in all the world there should be plain everyday want while perishable fortunes are thus carelessly heaped at the shrine of King

Mrs. Joseph Widener, though belonging to Philadelphia, is now recognized to be one of the coterie of fashionable women belonging to those who annuslly favor the horse in New York by the grace of their presence. One of Mrs. Widener's charming costumes this week has been a black broadcloth, ornamented with velvet and glittering paillettes, and wore with a big black velvet hat belonging to the flat mode, brightened by a puff of yellow. Her jewels were pearls and diamonds. Mrs. Widener on another occasion was the object of much favorable comment, clad in a frock of black net, made gorgeous with a thick tracery of gold. Her toque of black tulle, also held a touch of the gold trimmings.

Mrs. George Gould made her first appearance at the show in the afternoon. She was attired in a simply made gown of mastic colored cloth and a toque to match. Little Margery Gould accom-panied her mother and was the cynosure of all eyes in a wonderfully fashioned raglan coat of white broadcloth that cost no less than $150, and which was offset by a picture hat of white.

Mrs. Clarence Mackay has probably been the most remarkably costumed woman among the many who have been seen day after day in the boxes. She has chosen to wear white on more than one occasion. On the opening night Mrs. Mackay was gowned in white cloth. Her hat, in the English walking shape, was fashioned entirely of gar deniss. Among her jewels was an immense almond-shaped diamond fastene to a golden thread. Mrs. Mackay's mauve chiffon was one of the handsomest frocks seep. Its cost was fully $350. The hat worn with it, if possible, made its b auty more apparent. It was a large delicately fashioned affair of tulle matching the gown and built to flare from the face, above which rested a cluster of orchids. With this Mrs. Mackay wore a mauve tulle boa caught with orchids, and carried besides a muff of tulle in the same shade of her costume. This fluffy muff was also trimmed with flowers that characterized ber toilet. They were arranged to simulate a shower bouquet. Another of the gorgeous gowns that Mrs. Mackey has worn to the show is a velvet of the shade that is detected in the dregs of rich red wine. If it need d a softened touch this was given by a bos of cream lace and a muff of the same. Black lace is one of the smartest fabrics displayed in the makeup of the gowes. Not just the plain Chant lly lace, but a combination of that with inserts of jet until the effect is superb.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs on Tuesday evening appeared in one of these gowns. A gridle of blue velvet relieved the som-bre hue. In the toque of black tulle there was a knot of yellow. Mrs. Oel-richs, in a sprit of mischief and fresh from a dinuer company, wore at the side of her hat the favor she had brought from that affair. This was a festive donkey driven by a lad, the unique ornament causing many amus-

Foremost among box beauties last night was Mrs. John Jacob Astor. As usual h r costume was simple, and, as usual, becoming. It was composed of white and black silk paterned to stripes, Mrs. Astor's favorite design.

Price, including the spraying tube, is 75 cts Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Baim is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a natural ond healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Watren street, New York.
